Everybody respects the man who pays his bills promptly and pleasantly, and without trying to cast suspicion upon their correctness. We have known men who never paid a bill at all without disputing its justness, or finding some reason for being offended. It is unpleasant to have any business relations with such people, and altogether undesirable.

A little five-year-old boy of a family on Washinton street was told by his mother, a few days since, to amuse his little sister, a child of three. Accordingly he took her to one corner of the room, and, telling her to sit down, proceeded to divest her with a story: "Once there was a man named Jesus Christ," said he; "he was a good man, but some bad men got him and said they meant to hang him on a cross I'm d-d if they didn't do it, too -. " The mother interrupted the story right there.

A BIG STEAL IN HENRY COUNTY .-Henry county seems to be doomed in more ways than one; only a tew days ago a very nicely dressed gentleman made his appearance in the town of Napoleon and being a stranger of course he at once attracted the attention of the police who were anxious to learn his business and from whence he came, but in this matter they almost utterly failed, for the reason that he chose to keep his own counsel and not trust his business in the hands of those, who to him, were strangers. They followed him however into Saur's Drug and Book Store and there he divulged the fact that he had heard so much about the great curative properties of Saur's Blood and Liver Pills, and having been an invalid for years, he at once laid his plans to steal them if he could not buy them at a fair price; but you bet the "Little Dutchman" sold them in your valuable paper, I wish to say it was our happy lot to attend a surprise birth-day party last Friday Jan. 27, at Mr. Z. Marvin's in Bartlow township, it being his 63d birth-day. The day was pleasant for the occasion and by 10 o'clock the visitors began to come in and Mr. Marvin was very glad to see them, but was unable to fathom the mystery. He thought what under the sun is up. On being told he was very much elated and was the recipient of many congratulations. After a sumptuous dinner was served the balance of the day was enlivened by music and songs and a good time in general was had throughout the day. Among the numerous presents are the following:

Mr. Samuel Orns, set of plates; Mrs. Samuel Orns, can of currants; Mr. Jacob Brown and wife, shaving mug and brush; . Pitman and wife, silk handkerchief, Dr. M. J.
